That's not even the correct sticker that was included with the cassette, this whole thing looks suspect.

Hi, I do not want to offend. I do not understand why you say this is suspicious. I bought a copy, exact to that of the photo via ebay, possibly from an old Tommy Boy employee?. The seller offered it EXACTLY 10 years later, possibly to avoid copyright problems?). And the same sticker came with it. The track list is correct. I can upload a video to youtube with my copy and my sticker to prove it. I repeat, I do not want to offend. Peace

Haralem

Tracklist is missing a skit and (2) shout out tracks.

Since it was a "proposed album"

Kifer

It looks a little suspect but... Im assuming its what they turned into the suits at tommy boy before they even pressed legit promos? I thought bakers boys was a bit funny too

Hello. I bought a copy of this demo. It's real. it is not a fake. I could capture other fragments of the tracks to prove it. I'm a "Classic Soull Assassins Fan" from Argentina since 1994/5. Additional Data: in one of these tracks here chorus by Sen Dog (Cypress Hill). There is also another demo with a track that has a Sondoobie (Funkdoobiest) collabo. Is in youtube. SA/DMS/LCN Forever. Peace this looks mad fake. whoever knows actual Tommy Boy promo/advance releases should know. theres so many things wrong about it, one doesnt know where to start, but ill try anyway:- the Baka Boyz misspelled as Bakers Boys- cheap inkjet printer (or some 80s xerox photocopier) used to print out- generic empty 60 min tape from an electronic retailer down the street etc etc etc I'd say save your money, dont throw the $/€ at the seller. in fact I wonder whe the item isnt being removed, its a bootleg, and a bad one to make it worse.

Qucid

It's very possible The Baka Boyz were known as Bakers Boys back then. This was before they were well known and they are from Bakersfield.
